The June Sovereign proved that vaccines are neither safe or effective. This article will prove that 19th and 20th century inventions improved sanitation, which significantly reduced the death rate of infectious disease BEFORE vaccines were introduced. These inventions are as follows:

"Ice box"... 1840 by Thomas Moore. Shortly thereafter NYC saw the establishment of regular delivery routes for natural ice.

"Metal screens for doors and windows"... 1884 by John Golding. This invention reduced the number of house flies that entered a home. The house flies would spread disease by spreading infection from human and animal feces to food. The house fly was responsible for causing typhoid fever and cholera. If typhoid fever is not treated up to 30% of its victims can die.

"Chain-pull indoor toilet"... Invented in England in 1889. Only the wealthy and hotels could afford them. The original flush toilet was invented in the 1500's by John Harrington; hence "the John"!

"Modern flush toilet"... began to be used in the 1920's in America

"The flush toilet, together with the window and door screens, significantly reduced the rate of infectious diseases caused by house flies.

"Mechanical ice box"... 1911 General Electric, but it wasn't until the early 1930's that the usefulness of the "electric ice box" was realized when newly discovered Freon was introduced as the refrigerant.

"Penicillin"... discovered in 1928 by Alexander Fleming, Penicillin, the first true antibiotic, was not used 1940.

"Water and Sewage Treatment and Regulation" significantly improved public health. The profit driven fracking issue is currently destroying the safety of our water supply that government is supposed to ensure. Citizens of New York and NJ must stand up to the greedy corporate controlled governors of both states to insure the safety of the Delaware River basin. Unfortunately, both governors are idiots!

The National Health Federation, a not for profit health organization, published "United States Disease Death Rates" that includes a graph of five diseases from 1900 – 1965. The number of deaths per 100,000 is plotted for the five diseases against the year in three year increments. In addition, the year that vaccines were introduced, or used for three of the diseases is shown.

The following summarizes the number of deaths per 100,000 for each disease from 1900 to the year before the vaccines were introduced:

Diphtheria declined from 40% to 15% in 1919, even though the diphtheria vaccine was introduced in 1929. All five diseases were zero in 1965 including diseases not treated with vaccines.

Typhoid fever declined from 32% to zero by 1965. This disease is only treated with antibiotics when people travel to South and East Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean where this bacterial infection is found.

Measles declined from 13% to zero by 1954. The measles vaccine was introduced in 1963; nine years after the death rate was zero!

Whooping Cough (Pertussis) declined from 12% to 2% in 1945. Whooping cough vaccine was in widespread use in the late 1940's.

Scarlet fever declined from 10% to zero by 1953.

Improved sanitation due to the preceding inventions, increased life expectancy. As shown in the following table from the Congressional Research Service (CRS) "Report for Congress 8/16/2006, Life Expectancy in the United States."

Year of Birth	Males	Females
1900 - 1902	48	51
1909 - 1911	49	53
1919 - 1921	56	57
1929 - 1931	58	61
1939 - 1941	62	66
1949 - 1951	66	71
1979 - 1981	70	78
1989 - 1991	72	79
2002	75	80

From 1900 to 2002 the life expectancy of men and women increased 56%, and 57%, respectively.

In conclusion, the inventions of the 19th and 20th centuries significantly improved sanitation, lowered the death rate, and increased life expectancy before vaccines were introduced.

My youngest son became autistic after receiving the DPT (Diphtheria, Pertussis (whooping cough), Tetanus triple vaccine in 1967. The death rate from both diphtheria and pertussis were near zero, therefore the only logical reason for using these unnecessary vaccines was to increase the profits of the medical and pharmaceutical industries that pay for our reprehensible government representatives.
