National Moratorium on Vaccination – Uniting to End Vaccine Genocide

By: Ingri Cassel

On June 7, 2016, long-time New York City activist Sally Elkordy addressed the Department of Health and Human Services' Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) regarding the lack of science behind the multitude of vaccine recommended to our children. She read a short but comprehensive scientific explanation of why vaccines are neither safe nor effective in a statement prepared for her by retired Principal Research Scientist Viera Scheibner, PhD. She concluded by asking the ACIP to recommend a National Moratorium on Vaccination.

Elkordy noted that while she patiently waited four hours to deliver her statement orally for the record, she heard several proposals from various agency representatives involved with the national vaccination program. The two proposals that caught her attention: 1) a proposal to microchip all the nation's children; and 2) a proposal to enforce adult immunization through the Department of Homeland Security (DHS).

Many researchers have noted that autism spectrum disorders and autoimmune diseases are not the only side effects of mass vaccination programs. How about sterilization and gender bending? In a January 2016 American College of Pediatrics press release, concerns about the HPV vaccine Gardasil causing premature ovarian failure, also known as premature menopause, are raised based on six laboratory-confirmed cases since 2013. The press release further noted that long-term ovarian function was not assessed in either the original rat studies nor in the human trials prior to licensing Gardasil.

In his book, Killing Us Softly: Causes and Consequences of the Global Depopulation Policy, Kevin Mugur Galalae writes: "Since all chemical agents chosen to undermine human fertility work by damaging the endocrine system, the unintended side-effects to human health are legion. By disrupting the endocrine system, fluoride has an adverse effect on every part and function of the human body, impairing reproduction and development, the immune system and the nervous system. Illnesses associated with Western living standards – heart disease, diabetes, obesity, and cancer – conveniently attributed to poor diet and lack of physical activity, are in fact, for the most part, the result of the endocrine disrupting poisons deliberately fed to people in the developing world since 1950.

"As the architects of the Global Depopulation Policy have widened the use of these poisons to the developing world, the same illnesses are beginning to wreak havoc there. These so-called illnesses of affluence are in fact the effects of chronic poisoning and the epidemic is spreading to the developing world far in advance of the affluence that supposedly brought this curse upon the developed world.

"In countries like Brazil and Iran, for instance, where fluoridation and BPA use have been introduced fast and furious, and not as gradually as in the developed world, these so-called Western ailments are more deadly there than in the West. The WHO, which is central to the Global Depopulation Policy, predicts even more deaths in the future due to chronic illnesses, knowing full well what to expect once their poisons of choice are unleashed upon virgin populations.

"A second branch of illnesses caused or exacerbated by chemical sterilization agents are neurological and span the entire spectrum of developmental and mental disorders: learning disabilities, speech and language impairments, mental retardation, autism, attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder (ADD/ADHD), bipolar disorder, depression, anxiety disorder, obsessive-compulsive disorder, Alzheimer's, Down syndrome, dementia, chronic fatigue syndrome, dyslexia, epilepsy, motor skill disorders, Parkinson's disease, Tourette syndrome, antisocial behavior, schizophrenia, and countless other ailments. More than 25% of the populations exposed to chemical sterilization agents are affected by mental or developmental disorders; a ten-fold greater incidence than in populations that have not been chronically exposed to such toxic agents.

"A third group of illnesses concern sex hormone disorders: disorders of sex development, acquired sex disorders, disorders of gender, disorders of puberty, and menstrual function and fertility disorders. Of these by far the most concerning are gender identity issues, which is why the incidence of LGBT (lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender) is at least 10% higher in countries that have chemically poisoned their people to lower their fertility than in countries that have not.

"A fourth group of illnesses concern the damage done to the immune system, which is rendered either hyperactive or repressed, resulting in either autoimmune diseases and allergies or, respectively, in viral attacks and cancers. In one way or another, everyone who is subjected to the poisons of the Global Depopulation Policy suffers from damage done to the immune system.

"The overall effect of the West's chemical sterilization program will not be known until research is allowed to occur and scientists are not punished for publishing anything related to the pervasive chemical agents we are intentionally being subjected to for the sake of population control."

On June 7, 2016, Galalae completed 60 days of a hunger strike in Rome where he appealed to Pope Francis to end the current depopulation agenda using vaccines and chemtrails. He plans on continuing to Geneva, Switzerland to seal the doors of the World Health Organization and send Margaret Chan, its Director-General, back to China where she comes from. Please donate to his efforts at "Stop Depop by Vacs and Chemtrails" <https://www.gofundme.com/chs6x5k4> Our children, our future, depend upon our collective actions today.

On June 15, 2016 the U.S. Senate voted to require women to register for selective service when they turn 18 years old. Elkordy notes that, according to Galalae's research, only 50% of women of child bearing age are capable of conceiving and having children. The only population group besides infants that are more vaccinated in America are military personnel. And in an interview of Dr. Viera Scheibner by Elkordy, Scheibner claimed that one in ten children in America die in infancy.

Sherby who took Jessup's book to Varo, who soon reproduced both the book and the notes in the margins through their "Military Assistance" division.

Theories About The Reprinting

Barker offers two theories regarding Varo's role in publishing the Annotated Edition. The first is that top military brass had passed the book down through the lower echelon to avoid responsibility should any negative publicity result. It was to be published surreptitiously by Varo, who may have had top military security clearance, the idea being to prevent any leakage that might come by sending it to a standard government printing office. The military was allegedly interested in applying the notes to secret research being conducted at the time.

Another theory, which Barker considers the more likely of the two, is simply that Captain Sherby had a deep personal interest in UFOs and wanted copies to give to fellow Navy personnel who were also interested. The Varo Company may simply have been doing him a personal favor in making the reprint, which they reportedly often did for members of the military.

"No great degree of secrecy seemed to have been employed," according to Barker. "Jessup was called in by Varo and shown the book, and nothing in his subsequent writings or reported conversations indicates he was requested to maintain secrecy. Permission was obtained both from the author and the publisher, Citadel Press, to reproduce the text of the original book. Jessup was given several copies, probably the source of the copies a few UFO researchers reportedly possess."

The Mysterious Note Writers

Returning to the subject of the three "people" who made the margin notes, the Global Communications edition includes the introduction to the later facsimile printing, in which one learns more about them. Barker says the introduction is competently written but that the identity of the author remains unknown. The anonymous writer provides a more detailed summation of just who the mysterious three may have been.

Three different colors of ink were used: blue, blue-violet and blue-green. There are also three distinct handwritings. The three entities have been designated as Mr. A., Mr. B. and Jemi. It is assumed that the third person was named "Jemi" because of the direct use of the name in salutations, plus Mr. A. and Mr. B. refer to him that way throughout the book. It is also possible that two of the men are twins, given that there are two references to this word, with Mr. A. most likely being one of the twins while the other remains unknown.

It is probable that these men were gypsies.

"In the closing pages of the book," the unknown author writes, "Mr. B. says, 'Only a gypsy will tell another of that catastrophe. And we are a discredited people, ages ago. Hah! Yet man wonders where "we" come from.'"

If the aliens were indeed to dwell among us in human form, perhaps they would choose a life as gypsies. They would lead a nomadic existence, always on the move, with little in the way of material possessions, owning nothing but their "music and philosophy," and yet being truly happy. Or so the note writers claim.

Soon after the publication of his book, Jessup received a letter from Carlos Miguel Allende. Jessup maintained from the first that it was Allende who had sent the book to the Navy, and when one examines the handwriting, style, content and phraseology of both the notes and the letters, one is drawn to the conclusion that Allende was also Mr. A.

"These men have been careless in their spelling, capitalization, punctuation and sentence structure; though consistency indicates adherence to custom, perhaps dictated by their original language," the introduction reads.

Two of the Allende letters are included in the Global Communications reprint, and reading them makes for a fascinating if only partially comprehensible glimpse into the mystery. In a letter that Jessup received on January 13, 1956, Allende addresses the subject of the infamous 1943 Philadelphia Experiment, in which the Navy tried to use electromagnetic energy and principles first proposed by Albert Einstein to render a Navy destroyer invisible.

Allende claims that the Navy succeeded in rendering the ship invisible, even teleporting it a short distance, but some members of the crew were unable to return from a state of invisibility while others faded in and out physically and never completely resumed their normal solidity. More than half of the officers and crew went completely mad, while still others remained frozen solid where they stood. Allende claims to have detailed inside knowledge of the various mishaps suffered by the crew. In a second letter to Jessup, Allende tries to offer Jessup clues so he can search for real-world verification of the bizarre claims made about the Philadelphia Experiment. Allende also volunteers to be hypnotized so that more specific details can be discovered that will prove the story is true.

Everyone's A Critic

The tone of Allende's letters is a little boastful, even arrogant, which may also explain the superior attitude sometimes evinced by the three note writers, given that Allende is likely the real Mr. A. While the notes sometimes feel like some good-natured kibitzing, they often deride what they take to be Jessup's egomania, especially when Jessup tries to prove the reality of flying saucers at the expense of his ideological enemies. Even if Jessup is correct in what he says about UFOs, he should not hold himself so high over the nonbelievers he struggles against.

When Jessup does get a fact or concept correctly, the note writers say "He must be reading our thoughts," implying that Jessup couldn't have arrived at those same conclusions through mortal intelligence alone. One can imagine that Jessup's reaction to reading some of the snide asides may have been something like the old show biz retort, "Everyone's a critic!"

Jessup would go on to write three more books after "The Case For The UFO," in part laying the groundwork for a more scientific approach to the study of flying saucers. He urged the government and the scientific community to examine the subject from a variety of disciplines, a repeated refrain we continue to hear today more than 50 years later that still falls on deaf and unresponsive ears.

On April 20, 1959, Morris K. Jessup took his own life in Dade County Park in Florida by inhaling automobile exhaust fumes, using a hose from the tailpipe into his station wagon. He died in the same ignominious obscurity in which he had lived, unheralded and unrecognized by the scientists and academics he sought to share his knowledge of UFOs with. It is inevitable that some students of Ufology consider his death to be suspicious, and there is today no way of knowing whether Jessup freely chose to die or was murdered to silence some revelation he may have been intent on making public.

The preceding article is only a short summation of the Global Communications reissue of "The Case For The UFO." It is indeed the Varo Edition, including all the margin notes of the mysterious three, as well as two of the letters sent to Jessup by Carlos Allende, Gray Barker's informative introduction and the introduction from the unknown writer. The complete package is here, ready to read for the sake of improving your knowledge about a strange story in the field of Ufology, made even stranger by overt military involvement and the presence of unknown, possibly alien, commentators who seem to know more than we do about what's out there awaiting us. S to the contrary, has been shown throughout the country in both film festivals, theaters and as credit towards continuing education for attorneys. On June 3, 2016 Massachusetts Judicial Court Chief Justice Ralph Gants ordered a new trial for Oswelt Millien who had been convicted of abusing his daughter in a 'shaken-baby' case, opening a door for those wrongly convicted of SBS to be retired in Massachusetts.

It appears the sleeping masses are beginning to wake up on the vaccine agenda. The film "Vaxxed: From Cover-up to Conspiracy" has been playing at theaters in major cities throughout the country to large audiences who are resisting attempts by the state to force parents into compliance with their vaccine mandates. In light of all this, Elkordy proposes that each state get organized connecting all families who have a child or adult suffering from a vaccine injury. Then a large black ribbon will be passed from affected family to affected family during the month of August 2016, culminating with the selection of a woman or man to represent the state during October in a march on Washington D.C. Elkordy named October as Vaccine Injury Awareness Month in 2010 with Marian Greene of TruthAboutGardasil.org. To get involved, please contact Elkordy here tinyurl.com/vaccinefreenyc. S
